Defense: 2013 collapse contractor a small fry

Opening. Lawyer William Hobson says Griffin Campbell was not in charge of the demolition site that killed six.

The lawyer representing a contractor accused of murder in the June 2013 building collapse that killed six people said his client is a patsy.

"His skill set is minimal," attorney William Hobson told jurors during opening arguments in the murder trial of Griffin Campbell. "Griff's just a working guy."

Campbell, 51, a demolition contractor from North Philadelphia, oversaw the demolition of several buildings on the 2100 block of Market Street, prosecutors said.

They contend that the collapse was caused by a callous indifference to safety, one that sparked multiple warnings of pending disaster.

"This wasn't an accident, and this wasn't bad luck," said Assistant District Attorney Jennifer Selber.

Selber told jurors that Campbell engaged in a construction technique that left an unsupported, four-story wall looming over the top of the one-story Salvation Army Store below.

It was so dangerous, Selber said, that a strong gust of wind could have knocked it down.

But Hobson said that Campbell worked under the project's architect, Plato A. Marinakos Jr., who is expected to testify for prosecutors under a grant of immunity.

"You should not believe one word from Plato Marinakos," Hobson told jurors.

Marinakos, along with the building's owner Richard Basciano, were the ones who had the power to stop demolition.

"Griffin Campbell Construction is a small company," Hobson said. "How many employees does he have? Let's see. On any given day, he shows up at a job site and he makes some calls. It could be three, four or five."

Campbell and equipment operator Sean Benschop, 44, were the only people criminally charged in the collapse, which also injured 12 people.

Benschop pleaded guilty in July to six counts of involuntary manslaughter and other charges.

Prosecutors said they would seek a prison sentence not to exceed 10 to 20 years for Benschop, who tested positive for marijuana.

Campbell rejected the same plea offer that Benschop accepted.

Bricks and lumber from the century-old building fell onto the neighboring Salvation Army thrift store, killing four shoppers and two workers.

About a dozen others were injured, including a woman who was trapped in rubble for more than 12 hours and had to have both legs amputated.

A few days after the collapse, the city inspector who had reported no problems on the job site fatally shot himself in the chest. While officials concluded the inspector was not responsible for the collapse, he left a video message for his wife and young son saying he "should have been more diligent" in overseeing the project.

Papal flag stolen from South Philly residence

A theological question: If you steal a papal flag, are you forgiven by confessing, or do you have to give it back?

Surveillance video from the Philadelphia Police Department captured someone snagging one of the papal flags hung from someone's home on the 600 block of South 27th Street.

The suspects circled the block in a car twice, police said.

On the third go-around, one of them jumped out and grabbed the flag.

The incident happened Sept. 22. at approximately 6:30 a.m.

City Paper to close after sale, Metro US says

Philadelphia City Paper will cease publication after a sale to Broad Street Media, the owners of Philadelphia Weekly, Metro US, announced Wednesday.

The last publication date of the ground-breaking alt-weekly will be Oct. 8.

"We were shocked to hear this news," City Paper editor Lillian Swanson said. "I feel so badly that an important voice in Philadelphia is being silenced. We paid attention to stories that no one else did."

The alt-weekly industry — once known for their lusty ads offering adult services in the back and cutting-edge journalism in the front — has been hard hit by the economic forces that have buffeted other media outlets.

Metro US — the publisher of this paper and free dailies in Boston and New York — bought City Paper last year for an undisclosed amount. Terms of the sale to Broad Street Media were not disclosed.

The paper was widely known to be losing money, and company executives had said that they were closing the gap.

"We acquired it because we believe in newspapers," Metro CEO Yggers Mortensen said in an interview. "We weren't able to pull it off."

City Paper was founded in 1981 and has won numerous awards. DAN KELLEY

Protest. Service union seeks to tie fortunes to broader society

Thousands of janitors, members of the 32BJ SEIU union, marched to 2116 Chestnut Street in Center City to protest the firing of a dozen of their compatriots. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Thousands of people from the union representing commercial office cleaners rallied in Center City on Wednesday to highlight their work to help raise wages for other, non-unionized workers.

The rally came as janitors from local 32BJ of the Service Employees International Union prepared to negotiate new contracts for more than 75,000 workers on the East Coast.

"It's a larger fight," said Hector Figueroa, president of the local, which numbers 165,000 members and is increasingly one of the more powerful forces in labor politics. "All workers in this economy are hurting, and there's more awareness in this country."

The union has provided vital support to the Fight for $15 movement, which seeks a higher minimum wage for fast-food workers across the country. Locally, they were a force in the push to raise wages for non-unionized baggage handlers at the airport.

During the march through downtown, the members of the union carried signs that read "Elevate America," a message they hoped would underscore the degree to which the fortunes of unionized workers are tied to non-union ones.

Valarie Long, an executive vice president for the union who started as an office cleaner in Philadelphia, was excited by what she said were support by people on the street as the marchers wound through downtown Philadelphia.

"They know these wages trickle up to them," Long said.

The rally began on the 2100 block of Chestnut Street, in front of a building where about a dozen unionized workers were fired after the building was sold. Greystar, the property management firm that took over the building and hired non-union janitors, did not immediately return a call for comment. DAN KELLEY

Little Pete's / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Council vote signals end of Little Pete's

End of an era. Beloved diner, where the politicians rubbed shoulders with the hoi polloi, to be knocked down to pave way for new hotel.

City Council on Wednesday gave approval for a new hotel on the corner of 17th and Chancellor, a move that paves the way for the demise of beloved 24-hour diner Little Pete's.

The diner, located under a parking garage and known to serve the powerful and powerless alike, was praised by some members of city council, who expressed hope that downtown Philadelphia could sustain popularly priced restaurants.

"Some of the negatives [from] development are that people have to be relocated," said Councilman Bill Greenlee. "Despite all these upscale restaurants in Center City, I think there should be a place for a Little Pete's."

The diner, and the parking garage that stands over it, will be demolished to make room for a 13-story, 310-room Hyatt-branded hotel.

Executives behind the construction have pledged to help find a new home for the diner.

While there is no official closing date for the eatery, when it does close it will mark the steady decline of the 24-hour diner in Center City — there are just a handful left.

"They're a dying breed, for sure," said Patrick Grossi, of the Preservation Alliance for Greater Philadelphia. "The dining room is like a time capsule."

Owner John Koutroubas held out hope that the developers could help him find a new place. Still, he acknowledged its passing.

"I grew up in that place," said Koutroubas, "I grew old in that place. From judges to street people, they come in, they ask for food, I give them food."

Though the diner is known for having employees whose tenures have spanned decades, even as it prepares to close it has seen a mix of new and old.

Natasha Martinez, 30, has worked as a waitress for a few months. In that time, she's come to know the regulars, including the handful that eat three meals a day there.

"The people that come here are like family," Martinez said.

Online

Internet response

The closure of the diner has become something of a cause celebre on the internet. Daily Show correspondent John Hodgman launched a campaign to preserve the eatery, where diners have to walk through the kitchen to use the bathroom.

"So my favorite scrapple counter in the world, LITTLE PETE'S, is almost assuredly dead in greasy dishwater because SOME MEN WITH COMPANIES WANT A HOTEL THERE," Hodgman wrote in a blog post earlier this year.

Prosecutors. Caitlyn Jenner will not be charged in fatal car crash

Former Olympian and reality TV star Caitlyn Jenner will not be charged in connection with a crash in Malibu earlier this year that killed a 69-year-old woman, Los Angeles prosecutors said on Wednesday.

Based on the facts in the case, prosecutors lacked evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Jenner's conduct was unreasonable, according to documents provided by the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office.

Jenner, 65, was driving a Cadillac Escalade along Pacific Coast Highway and towing a trailer carrying a dune buggy when she slammed into two other cars, according to authorities.

During the crash, a white Lexus being driven by 69-year-old Kim Howe was shoved by Jenner's sport utility vehicle across a center divider and into oncoming traffic, where it was struck head-on by a Hummer.

Howe was killed in the collision and Jessica Steindorff, who was driving a black Toyota Prius also rear-ended by Jenner, was injured.

Caitlyn Jenner / GETTY IMAGES

Jenner escaped serious injury in the crash and declined medical treatment, authorities said at the time.

Civil cases typically require a lesser burden of proof than criminal courts. A spokeswoman for Howe's attorney could not immediately be reached following the district attorney's decision on Wednesday.

Bruce Jenner was known to younger generations as the patriarch of reality TV's Kardashian clan before announcing in a nationally televised interview in April that he is transgender.

Caitlyn Jenner is now the star of her own reality TV show, "I Am Cait," centered on her transition.

REUTERS

The accident

Details according to a summary of the investigation released by the district attorney's office:

- Jenner was driving slightly below the speed limit and "minimally slower than the victim" and braked 1.9 to 1.5 seconds before the collision.
- The only possible violation against Jenner would be a "violation of the basic speed law," meaning too fast for the conditions.
- Prosecutors said that "crime also requires ordinary negligence. Based on facts, cannot prove beyond a reasonable doubt that suspect's conduct was unreasonable."
- Reasonable doubt is the standard required in California, and in most U.S. courts, to prove a defendant guilty of a crime. Both Steindorff and Howe's family have sued Jenner.

Russia begins Syria airstrikes as war enters volatile new phase

Air strikes. They plunged the four-year-old civil war into a volatile phase to assert Russian influence in region.

Russia launched airstrikes in Syria on Wednesday in the Kremlin's biggest Middle East intervention in decades, but Moscow's assertion that it had hit Islamic State was immediately disputed by the United States and rebels on the ground.

Moscow and Washington offered conflicting accounts of which targets had been struck, underlining growing tensions between the two former Cold War foes over Russia's decision to intervene. Washington is concerned that Moscow is more interested in propping up Syrian President Bashar al-Assad than in beating Islamic State.

The Russian defense ministry said the strikes targeted military equipment, communication facilities, arms depots, ammunition and fuel belonging to Islamic State.

U.S. officials said targets in the Homs area appeared to have been struck, but not areas held by Islamic State.

Russia warned the United States ahead of the strikes to keep its aircraft out of Syrian airspace, but the United States pressed forward with its campaign of airstrikes against Islamic State forces and said it had targeted Islamic State near the Syrian city of Aleppo.

A U.S. official said Moscow gave Washington just an hour's notice of its strikes, which the Kremlin said were designed to help Assad, its closest regional ally, push back Islamist militants.

Notice of the attack came from a Russian official in Baghdad who asked the U.S. air force to avoid Syrian airspace during the mission, U.S. State Department spokesman John Kirby said.

In Moscow, Putin said Russian airstrikes in Syria would be limited in scope and that he hoped Assad was ready for political reform and a compromise for the sake of his country and people.

"I know that President Assad understands that and is ready for such a process. We hope that he will be active and flexible and ready to compromise in the name of his country and his people," he told reporters.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said Washington would have "grave concerns" if Russia hit Syrian targets where Islamic State fighters were not present. Speaking at the U.N. Security Council, Kerry also said the militant group, which is also known as ISIL and ISIS, "cannot be defeated as long as Bashar al-Assad remains president of Syria." REUTERS

Military involvement

Russia joins world powers

Moscow's intervention means the conflict in Syria has been transformed in a few months from a proxy war, in which outside powers were arming and training mostly Syrians to fight each other, to an international conflict in which the world's main military powers except China are directly involved in fighting.

That raises the risks of military accidents between outside powers and raises pressure for a diplomatic solution, without making it any easier.

Russia joined the United States and its Arab allies, Turkey, France, Iran and Israel in direct intervention, with Britain expected to join soon. REUTERS

Congress averts shutdown of the government

Funding measure sent to Obama. He will sign a stopgap funding measure approved by Congress.

The U.S. Capitol / GETTY IMAGES

Ending weeks of infighting, Congress on Wednesday voted to avert a government shutdown just hours before a midnight deadline, passing a stop-gap measure to extend funding for federal agencies until Dec. 11.

The House of Representatives relied heavily on Democrats to secure passage in a 277 to 151 vote. A large majority of Republicans voted against the measure, which did not meet conservatives' demands to cut off money to women's health care provider Planned Parenthood amid an abortion controversy.

The House also passed a companion bill aimed at restoring the Planned Parenthood defunding provision, but the Senate is not expected to act on it, effectively killing it.

The spending extension now moves to President Barack Obama to be signed into law.

Obama welcomed the news with a tinge of sarcasm in remarks to a group of progressive state legislators in Washington.

"The good news is that it looks like the Republicans will just barely avoid shutting down the government for the second time in two years. That's a somewhat low bar but we should celebrate where we can," Obama said.

"The bad news is that it looks like Republicans will just barely avoid shutting down the government again for the second time in two years," he added.

The controversy over Planned Parenthood funding threatened a repeat of a 17-day shutdown in October 2013 that was prompted by Republican demands to deny federal funding for Obama's health care law, the Affordable Care Act. REUTERS

A Kentucky county clerk who had been jailed for refusing to issue marriage licenses to gay couples secretly met Pope Francis during his visit to the United States last week, a meeting she called greatly encouraging.

The Vatican confirmed the pope's meeting in a brief statement on Wednesday.

Rowan County Clerk Kim Davis and her husband met the pope during the Washington leg of his U.S. visit, she and her lawyer told American media.

With the issue of same-sex marriage dividing Americans, the pope's meeting with Davis and Francis' comments on Monday may further embolden local officials across the United States who have said they will not issue marriage licenses to gay couples.

In Texas, Alabama and elsewhere a number of clerks and judges who stated their opposition to gay marriage have thrown up roadblocks to the unions.

Davis' attorney, Mat Staver, told CBS News, "The fact that [the pope] met with Kim Davis sends a message that he is someone who stands with those individuals who are standing up for their religious convictions, that religious freedom is a worldwide message that the pope wants to convey." REUTERS

2 South Dakota principal wounded in high school shooting

The principal of a South Dakota high school was wounded by a gunshot on Wednesday and a student was taken into custody, according to officials and media reports.

The gunshot victim was in stable condition, Lincoln County State's Attorney Tom Wollman said.

Reuters was not immediately able to confirm local media reports that the injured person was the principal of Harrisburg High School, south of Sioux Falls.

The shooter, a student, was subdued by staff and was taken into custody, Wollman said. REUTERS

Joaquin strengthens into hurricane

Joaquin strengthened into the third hurricane of the 2015 Atlantic season on Wednesday, the U.S. National Hurricane Center said, although forecast models did not agree on whether the storm will make landfall in the United States.

Joaquin strengthened from a tropical storm into a Category 1 hurricane with maximum sustained winds of 80 miles per hour and was located about 215 miles east-northeast of the central Bahamas, the center said. REUTERS

Officer dead in shooting at suburban S.C. mall

A South Carolina police officer was fatally shot at a mall on Wednesday after a struggle with a knife-wielding gunman.

Officer Greg Alia of the Forest Acres Police Department died after responding with other officers to a call about a suspicious person, Police Chief Gene Sealy told reporters.

A suspect, identified as Jarvis Hall, ran from the officers into the mall, Sealy said. Alia caught up with him and was shot during an ensuing struggle.

Hall, who was armed with a handgun and knife, was taken into custody, the police chief said. REUTERS

Georgia executes a woman for the first time in 70 years

Georgia executed its only woman on death row on Wednesday, marking the first time in 70 years the state has carried out a death sentence on a woman.

Kelly Gissendaner, 47, died by lethal injection at Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Prison in Jackson, a prison spokeswoman said.

Gissendaner was sentenced to death after being convicted of what is known in the state as malice murder for her role in plotting the killing of her husband, Douglas, in 1997. REUTERS

Erectile Dysfunction:
Travel the Road to Treatment

Erectile dysfunction (E.D.) affects more than 30 million men in the U.S. It is especially common in men with diabetes, high cholesterol, high blood pressure, obesity, prostate cancer, prostate surgery, heart problems, and in past or current cigarette smokers. However, it is now possible to treat almost all men with E.D! E.D. undermines a man's sexual confidence—but successful treatment can restore it! Many E.D. treatments are covered by most insurance and prescription plans.

Attend a FREE seminar to educate men and their partners about approved E.D. treatment options. Free refreshments will be served, and partners are encouraged to attend.

Featuring:

Ben Affleck is over his nanny phase

K thanks bye. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

They said it was just a phase, and apparently they were right. Ben Affleck has reportedly called off his post-divorce dalliance with his and Jennifer Garner's former nanny, Christine Ouzounian — to the rejoicing of spell-checkers everywhere. "He cut ties with her recently," a source tells Life & Style. "He told Christine he couldn't handle another relationship when things were still so painful and raw between him and Jen." Sure, that. And maybe also because you shouldn't date the nanny? I mean, I understand the siren song of convenience and all, but come on. "He had fun with [her], but it wasn't love," the source adds, wistfully.

Vengeful Brian Austin Green wants alimony from Megan Fox

Poor Brian Austin Green. Not only is he going through a divorce — amicable or not — from Megan Fox, but now everyone gets to see the documents showing him asking her for spousal support. TMZ got its hands on this week's filing, in which Green valiantly checked the "spousal or domestic partner support" box, indicating that Fox is the bigger earner of the two. Which makes sense, because Green has apparently been battling vertigo and not working much since he and Fox were in a car accident last December. Bummer, man.

He does look a little woozy.

George R.R. Martin confirms 'Game of Thrones' movie

As if all the Emmys weren't enough, the "Game of Thrones" folks are planning to make the jump to the big screen after their HBO run is wrapped up, author George R.R. Martin confirms, according to the Daily Star. "There will be a movie, but I will not be involved. I have too much to do. That is something HBO and [the show's writers] are dealing with," Martin explains. "I have two more books to finish, and I still have so much to do." Yeah, you do. An anonymous source on the hit series' production staff says the movie could even feature some beloved but long-dead characters. "With the 'Game Of Thrones' universe there is much rich material and no constraints on when that story will take place," the source says. "They are looking at dipping back in time during certain periods of the series, which could be examined as a one-off plot. That means that some of the big characters who fans have seen die on screen could be resurrected, such as Robb Stark, Catelyn Stark, Oberyn Martell — and Ned Stark." This, I can get behind.

So much for Amanda Seyfried and Justin Long

Fun while it lasted?

Amanda Seyfried has apparently kicked boyfriend Justin Long to the curb after two years of dating, according to Us Weekly. "It happened a few weeks ago," a source explains. "He's really heartbroken." Earlier this year in an interview with Vogue, Seyfried revealed how she initially fell for Long — on Instagram, if you can believe it — and hinted that things might not be working out so well. "I thought something he said was really funny. It was a beautiful picture of a snail, and the caption said, 'F—ing MOOOOOOOOVE.' It made me laugh out loud, so I texted him," she explained. But: "Making movies is two solid months of 12-, 14-hour days. I mean, it can ruin your relationship." Apparently she wasn't just talking hypothetically.

Katy Perry deals with a handsy fan groping

YOUTUBE

A concert is a party, but some people always party a little harder than others. Like this Brazilian fan at Katy Perry's "Rock in Rio" gig, who was apparently not too preoccupied with pop star personal space. Perry brought the ebullient young woman — in a smiley-face halter top — up onstage for a little quality time but ended up getting more than she bargained for as the young woman proceeded to kiss, pet and grope Perry at any given opportunity. "I think she's rolling," the singer surmised. I mean, probably?

"Dr. Ken" premieres Friday at 8:30 p.m. on ABC. / DANNY FELD

An ensemble man takes center stage

Interview. Ken Jeong is finally ready for his close-up on the new sitcom "Dr. Ken."

Even if you don't know his name, chances are you've seen Ken Jeong in something. He originally popped up as a very brusque doctor in "Knocked Up," but has since appeared in a number of comedy hits over the years, from the "Hangover" movies to a long run on "Community." Now, he's finally getting a chance to do his own thing on "Dr. Ken," a sitcom loosely based on his life. He stars as an irritable doctor struggling with how to be a good parent to his kids, and how to get everyone to admit he's always right.

Having been part of a number of big ensembles, how does it feel to get your own show?
Honestly, I'm just so grateful. You can tell, here, it really is a great ensemble. Though my name is in the title, I do think of this as an ensemble-driven show. I think it really is, because, you know, being on "Community" for six years, all the projects I've done have been ensemble-driven. "Knocked Up," "The Hangover," all of them, it's never been about one person. "Community" especially. I think that's pretty deeply rooted in my DNA. So really as the show evolves, to me, it's really more about the ensemble. It's great.

GETTY IMAGES

How much of your real life has ended up in the show?
Everything comes from a place of reality and is always fictionalized for effect. There are definite episode ideas I have that have come from a real place, from a real point in my life, from my career in medicine, and then it is organically massaged into something that's comedic or something that's usable as a runner or a story. That's been the fun part of it. There's really cool stuff that you wouldn't know, watching the final product, it emanated from that. This is easily the most grounded character I've ever had because it's based on me.

Is it hard to transition from the oddball characters you've played in the past to more of a straight man?
It's great that the public can accept me for my outsideness, like on "Community" and "The Hangover." It's actually easier, in my opinion, to transition to the straight-man foil than most people think. It's sometimes harder if you're used to playing the straight person and the public so identifies you with that — then, if you're doing something remotely crazy, that can be jarring.

One more thing

Co-star chemistry

Suzy Nakamura stars as Jeong's wife, Allison, who's a psychiatrist. We asked her what it's like to play someone based on the real thing.

Are you learning more about psychiatry now?
I'm going to do my best. But I love that my character feels that she has a bit of a one-up on Ken because she understands his psyche. His wife in real life, Tran [who is a family physician], is a big inspiration to me because she's very calm and she does ground him in a way. I loosely based my character off her energy.

CRAIG SJODIN

Did she give you any tips?
No, but I remember I looked to her after the taping and when she was laughing, I was happy.

LET YOUR GEEK FLAG FLY AT A CON

Welcome to Nashville's Wizard World. / PROV

I just got back from my 13th comic book convention of the year, and it's not my last before December 31. If I had a dollar for every Deadpool costume I've seen this year, I'd be able to buy all the remote control BB-8s! You may have heard me complaining about cons online: eating nothing but pizza for three days or how I've outwalked my step counter. But with the exception of San Diego Comic-Con, which has frankly gotten too big for the space it's in, you'll never hear me say I hate them.

This time around, it was the Nashville Wizard World, where I got to moderate a bunch of panels, including the "Dukes of Hazzard," "Firefly" and "CHiPs" reunions, as well as ones for Danny Trejo and Candice Patton from "The Flash." It's really hard to beat talking to these amazing people, but that's not the thing that makes me love them. It's the absolute love of every permutation of nerd culture and everyone who shares in it.

It sounds like a given, but there were some amazing moments that you'd find in very few other places. I watched a woman burst into applause when we talked about her favorite female character on a panel and how things are changing for the industry. She got choked up when we talked about it afterward. I saw a 4-year-old kid who just discovered "CHiPs" squeal in happiness after taking over the panel with his motorcycle questions. I watched a Make-A-Wish kid absolutely beam with joy when he got a hug from the "Dukes of Hazzard" cast. Sure, those shows may be long since over. They may not be technically "geek," but that's the thing about this world: If you love it, you can find people who love it right along with you.

I heard a girl tell her friend all about classic "Doctor Who" and completely convince her to watch. I saw a dad explaining the parts of a broken Millennium Falcon toy at a booth to his tiny son dressed as Han Solo. I was there when a sea of people with Jayne Cobb hats (including one very cute baby) got up onstage to take pictures with Adam Baldwin and Jewel Staite after the panel. I had yet another little boy tell me he didn't buy the Avengers set because Black Widow wasn't in it.

Why am I writing this? Mostly because I got yet another chance to see something magical. I got to see that, no matter who you are and what you love, you're not alone. Go to a con. Meet brand new friends. Let your geek flag fly. You're not the only one.

Directions:

1 Cook rice. Rinse rice in a strainer until water runs clear. Combine rice and 1½ cups water in a small saucepan and bring to a simmer. Reduce heat to low, cover and cook until rice is tender and water absorbed, 15 minutes. Set aside and leave covered.

2 Cook spinach. Trim any large stems from spinach. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Cook spinach in boiling water until wilted, 30 seconds. Drain and rinse under cold water to cool. Gather spinach in a clean dish towel and squeeze out as much water as possible. Set aside.

3 Prepare batter. Trim scallions and thinly slice. Using your hands, squeeze liquid from kimchi over a bowl; reserve 3 tablespoons then chop kimchi. Combine kimchi liquid, kimchi, 2 scallions, ½ cup flour, ¼ cup water, ½ teaspoon sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt, and stir to combine.

4 Make pancakes. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium-high. Add half of batter and spread to an 8-inch round. Cook until golden and crispy, 3–4 minutes per side. Repeat with 1 tablespoon oil and remaining batter.

5 Finish spinach. In a small bowl, combine rice vinegar and tamari. Roughly chop spinach and toss with 1 tablespoon tamari sauce and sesame seeds.

6 Serve. Cut pancakes into wedges and top with remaining sliced scallion. Serve with sesame spinach, rice and tamari sauce for dipping. Enjoy!

MARLEY SPOON

We've been slightly obsessed with these kimchi pancakes over the past few weeks; we can't get enough of those crispy edges. To balance the heat of the kimchi, we've added a bowl of fluffy rice and a side of cooling sesame spinach. We like to cut our pancakes into wedges so we can eat with our fingers, though you're welcome to leave them whole. If you're in the mood, you might want to play around with a bigger pancake, though beware, they're harder to flip! Cook, relax and enjoy!

Aries Love is in a high cycle. A social or cultural event will give you a chance to meet compatible personal or professional partners.

Taurus Someone from your past will cause you to rethink a situation. If you have strayed too far from your intended target, consider setting a new goal.

Gemini If emotions are running high, rethink your position. Shopping or visiting a friend will help you put your situation into proper perspective.

Cancer Lending or borrowing money or possessions is discouraged. Take a closer look at your bank account. Keep some funds in reserve.

Leo Make the most of your good will and offer your services to a charitable organization. Your charm will encourage people to join your cause.

Virgo You may feel like pampering yourself, but remember that overindulgence or overspending will put you at a disadvantage.

Libra You'll find inspiration if you travel. Visiting new places and exploring various philosophies and cultures will spark a creative concept.

Scorpio Financial gains are possible if you are proactive. Go over contracts carefully. Property deals should be considered as a source of extra income.

Sagittarius You will end up in an awkward position if someone you care about feels stifled. Trying to win every discussion will not lead to happiness.

Capricorn Take it easy. You need rest and relaxation if you want to be at your best. Some quality downtime will help you regroup.

Aquarius You will be the star of the show. Others will be drawn to your sense of humor. When possible, include younger family members in your plans.

Pisces You will be resentful if a family member is being secretive. You should initiate an honest dialogue without being critical. EUGENIA LAST

Who's up for pie?

A.D. AMOROSI

Mini-vacation

Stargazy had to close last Thursday right before the pope's visit — the oven's temperature sensor broke.

"The problem was it took five days to get someone out because of the papal visit — just unfortunate timing," says the chef. "My friends at other restaurants on the Avenue were very generous in letting me use their ovens during that time, but ultimately I decided that it wouldn't be such a bad idea to have a couple of days off."

WHERE TO EAT, DRINK & PLAY

going out

Things got dicey when the oven broke just before the pope came to town — but Chef Sam Jacobson is used to a little chaos.

A.D. AMOROSI
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

When Chef Sam Jacobson came from Central London's Holborn area to Philadelphia 10 years ago, he didn't know what he wanted to do. "I moved here on a whim," says Jacobson, who wound up in the kitchens at Sycamore in Lansdowne and Southwark in Queen Village before hitting upon a concept for a spot of his own.

"I was throwing ideas around for a little bakery, particularly a daytime shop," the chef says. "My girlfriend at the time humored me through ideas, but when I mentioned pie and mash — there wasn't anywhere to get that in Philly — she said, 'Do that, and you must serve the eels, too.'"

Jacobson opened Stargazy on East Passyunk at the end of the summer, serving British-style pies, both savory and sweet, alongside Cornish pastry, sausage rolls and Bedfordshire clangers (long pastries that have a savory filling at one end and a sweet filling at the other).

"There's no real secret to making these pies," he says. "Just keep it simple."

The star of Stargazy is its meat pies — go for the lamb curry with kale, steak and kidney beans, or the rabbit sausage. You can also opt for a parsley liquor sauce topping or a side of mashed potatoes.

Better still, there are those eel pies that Jacobson's former girlfriend likes, a British favorite made with jellied or stewed eels, which Jacobson tries to source locally. "Every eel that's not imported gets bought up in Chinatown, so I've been getting them from there when I can, live from the tanks. It's worth it. The eel pies have been really popular. People seem nervous, but then they taste them and wonder what they were worried about."

Chef Sam Jacobson A.D. AMOROSI

Stargazy typically sells out of the 100 to 150 items available daily, long before the day is over. Jacobson just bought a new cooler to double his storage space, and is experimenting with new pies such as duck, prunes and bacon. "I had expected to be slow at first because it was still summer, but the response has been fantastic," he says. "Overwhelming, even."

North African food comes to the Italian Market

Bouillabaisse at Neuf BOB MOYSAN

Chef Joncarl Lachman describes his new restaurant Neuf as a "sexy, candlelit spot."

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

Chef Joncarl Lachman is one of those people who sees something missing in the marketplace and fills the hole — even if we didn't realize there was a hole. Before the Southwest Philadelphia native returned home from Chicago to open the well-received Noord on East Passyunk Avenue in 2013, there wasn't a high-end Dutch/Nordic restaurant in Philly. So too with Neuf, Lachman's new North African/French bistro that opened in the Italian Market yesterday.

"I'm not trying to be different — but I certainly prefer to be," says Lachman with a laugh. "I want to cook what's inside of me. That makes me nervous — I want it to be right — but that's the only way I can open a restaurant.

"Besides, Philly's ready for different."

Lachman says Neuf, which he opened with husband Bob Moysan, has a "tattered elegance" to the decor, riffing off the lived-in look of an old house in South Philly. Design elements include a distressed-silver cocktail bar and worn-looking wood.

"That look and feel is very much in my wheelhouse — homey, a little rough, filled with the traditions of home cooking," Lachman says. The comfortableness is echoed in the "fisherman roots" of the menu, which features deep roasted and braised items (the chef says that he can't wait to do a zesty roasted goat dish) along with bright spices.

"At Neuf, I use many of the same cooking techniques that I do at Noord. That's why it sticks in my brain and in my heart," Lachman says. "[It's] cooking with passed-down traditions."

Shakshuka is a dish with eggs and tomatoes. REESE AMOROSI

Dinner for two

If you're building what Lachman calls a "sexy, candlelit spot," then the food that follows should be a sensual experience. Menu items such as the Moroccan tagine, cooked and served in an earthenware pot with chicken, lamb shoulder and/or vegetables in a cinnamon-tomato broth, is best served for two.

You can get bouillabaisse for one at Neuf, but the seafood-based meal is so much sexier when ordered for a pair. As for kushari (or koshari), an Egyptian street food with macaroni, lentils, rice and tomato-vinegar sauce, you can handle that one on your own.

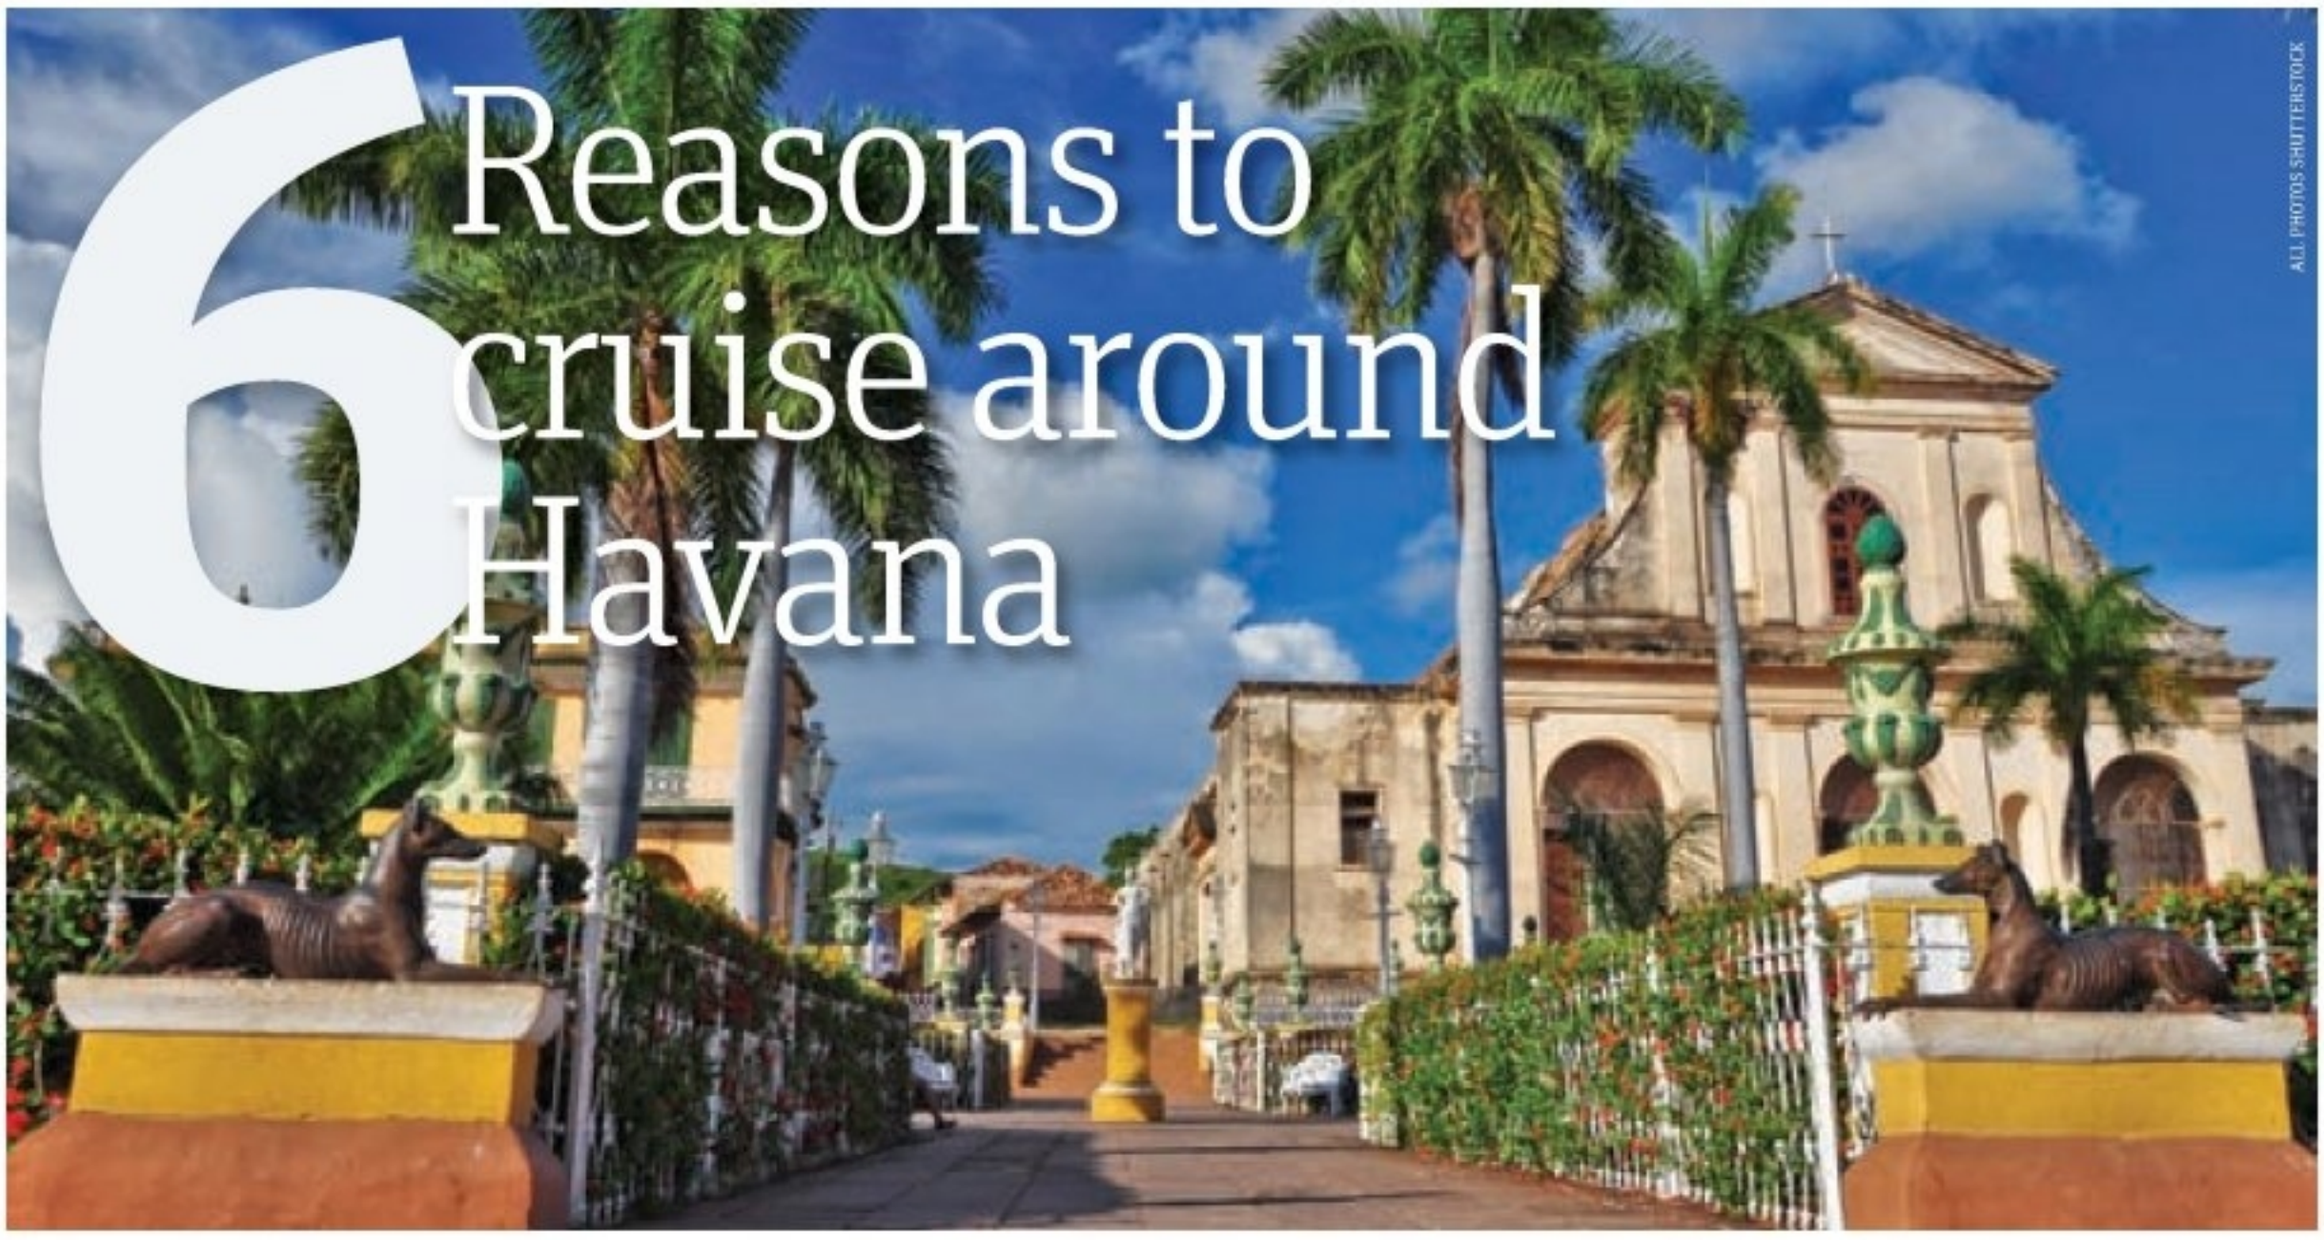
6 Reasons to cruise around Havana



ALL PHOTOS SHUTTERSTOCK

With the resumption of diplomatic relations between Havana and Washington, Cuba is poised to become the hottest Caribbean island.

Cuba is only 90 miles from Key West in Florida, but it has been forbidden fruit for Americans for more than 50 years. Most Americans still need authorization to go, and there are as yet no scheduled air or ferry services from the United States, but don't let that put you off. A cruise is an even better way to get a real feel for the island.

Greek company Variety Voyager has cruises between Havana and Cienfuegos that stay two nights in the capital. Cuba Cruise by Celestyal Cruises has seven-night voyages that circumnavigate the island and an alternative embarkation in Montego Bay, Jamaica, which is a much easier access point for Americans.

Here are six things not to miss when you're there:

1 Follow in the footsteps of Ernest Hemingway by visiting his former home, Finca Vigia, 10 miles east of Havana and now a museum (you're not allowed in, but you can peek through the windows). Back in the capital, toast the famed author with a mojito in the Bodeguita del Medio and a daiquiri in the Floridita. They were his favorite drinks and watering holes.

2 A Coco taxi (yellow, round, and great fun) is the only way to travel in Havana — apart from the classic American cars that adorn the roads and also serve as cabs. Remember to agree to a price before starting out.

3 Old Havana has an alluring mix of neoclassical architecture — don't miss the grand El Capitolio, modeled on the Capitol in Washington — and faded elegance. You can learn the art of cigar rolling and rum-making on factory visits, shop for locally made crafts and round off the day at the Tropicana, a colorful Las Vegas-style show of song, dance and skimpy costumes.

4 Trinidad, on the south coast, was built on the proceeds of slavery and sugar and is packed with museums that portray life during colonial times. Cantero Palace on elegant Plaza Mayor is the best choice, but leave time to stroll and admire the city's fabulous colonial architecture.

5 Cemetery Santa Efigenia in Santiago de Cuba is the resting place of Jose Marti, who led Cuba's fight to oust the Spanish in the late 1800s. Every 30 minutes between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., they change the guard at his mausoleum while the Cuban national anthem plays.

6 Cienfuegos was the only Cuban city founded by the French. Make your way to the Parque Jose Marti, which is surrounded by an 1870-built neoclassical cathedral, the grand Teatro Tomas Terry and a mini Arc de Triomphe. INSIGHT GUIDES | JANE ARCHER

It's the Halloween season, when spirits, ghouls and things that go bump in the night invite living visitors to meet them at haunted sites.

It's not that spirits return only at Halloween — it's that the original solstice celebrations made people more aware of them. Those rituals have since evolved into secular fun. Party stores say Halloween is their busiest season, far outselling St. Patrick's Day, Cinco de Mayo and even New Year's.

At one time, only famous historic locations with obvious connections to ghosts had tours of haunted sites. Now, almost any place that predates electricity claims a paranormal pedigree and schedules guided tours to show off its resident ghouls. Sometimes theatrical with costumed guides and staged "encounters," and sometimes conducted by serious paranormal investigators, the walks mix folklore, history and documented strange occurrences.

Most tours are family-friendly, with just a few spooky chills. A few are very intense with truly frightening stories and ghostly encounters. Some include a paranormal investigation element, which could mean some supernatural guests joining the stroll.

Here are some walks worth taking:

With the history of the witch trials in Salem, Massachusetts (Salem.org), and the carnage of the Battle of Gettysburg (Destinationgettysburg.com), it's no wonder that both towns offer a variety of ghost tours. Their tourism websites have links to all of the ghost walk companies with descriptions of the events.

Red Cloak Haunted Tours (Redcloakhauntedhistorytours.com) has several kid-friendly treks through towns of the central Maine coast, researched and conducted by a local historian and storyteller.

Ft. Delaware (Delawarestateparks.reserveamerica.com), located on an island in the Delaware River, was used as a prison for Confederate soldiers during the Civil War. Conditions were terrible and many of the inmates died. Accessible only by boat, there are several tours available. The Appetite for Apparitions Dinner and Ghost Tour includes dinner at a dockside restaurant, a cruise to the fort and a visit to the more haunted areas of the prison. There are also several paranormal investigation tours.

Another "grub and ghost" night is in Rochester, New York (rochesterghosts.com), with dinner in a haunted house followed by a séance. There's also a cemetery stroll and instruction in using a dowsing rod to detect spirit energy.

Portsmouth's Wicked Haunted Waterfront Tour by Newenglandcuriosities.com is very intense and not for kids. For a different kind of spirit, join their Haunted Pub Tour.

The Appalachian and Blue Ridge mountains are filled with stories from Native American and Celtic lore. Appalachian Ghost Walks (Appalachianghostwalks.com) has a roster of two- to three-hour tours through several historic mountain towns.

With everything from haunted hotels that still cater to guests to sightings of lynching victims, Maryland's Eastern Shore vibrates with spooky energy. Chesapeake Ghost Walks (Chesapeakeghostwalks.com) visits several cities, parks and resorts every week on tours that combine the region's history with its ghosts.

SELL NOW ON THESE BIG-NAME PLAYERS

Marshawn Lynch has accumulated just 128 yards on 38 carries so far this season. / GETTY IMAGES

Selling low is usually a really bad idea in any kind of investment venture. We will typically show a better return by surviving the bad times and waiting for things to positively progress toward the mean.

But in fantasy football, we don't have a lot of time. Most "regular seasons" are 13 weeks, meaning we need to start getting wins and we need them now. These big names are unlikely to turn their seasons around:

Pickups of the week

Who to add for Week 4:

- Karlos Williams, RB, Bills — LeSean McCoy's hamstring injury is proving more serious than anticipated.
- Ty Montgomery, WR, Packers — Jordy Nelson is out for the year and Davante Adams has a high-ankle sprain.

Not so easy Breesy

Drew Brees was in trouble long before his rotator cuff got bruised. The Saints made it clear this offseason that they wanted to change their style, dumping Jimmy Graham and Kenny Stills while investing heavily in the running game and the offensive line. Brees' skills are diminishing and when he drops back, he's looking at a 5-foot-10 No. 1 WR in Brandin Cooks, along with Brandon Coleman, Ben Watson and a broken-down Marques Colston. Even when Brees' shoulder gets right, owners are better off looking elsewhere at the quarterback position.

Andre the not-so-giant

Andre Johnson was a Texans legend, arguably the greatest player in the history of the franchise. After last season, they simply washed their hands of him despite having one of the thinnest WR depth charts in the league. The Colts are finding out why now, as Johnson is moving like a lumbering tight end instead of an elite receiver. Unable to separate, he's been leaped by Donte Moncrief for No. 2 wideout. Andrew Luck has a 7.4 rating when throwing at the 34-year-old, something he's done 18 times.

Beasting the wall

There's still plenty of value on the trade market for Marshawn Lynch and owners would do well to explore it. We can't say for sure that he's hit the wall, but we've seen this scene too many times before. A 29-year-old running back with at least 280 carries in four straight seasons can't get over hamstring, calf and back issues. When on the field, he becomes increasingly touchdown-dependent. Meanwhile, the team has new and exciting options in Graham and Tyler Lockett. Lynch is worth moving for 80 cents on the dollar.

What's the problem with Sam Bradford?

NFL. The Eagles passing game has regressed in Sam Bradford's (limited) tenure as quarterback.

Is Sam Bradford capable of more? / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

The Eagles really went for it with Sam Bradford.

They jettisoned a young quarterback in Nick Foles, one who had yet to show whether he was a franchise-leading signal caller. They also got rid of a second-round draft pick and decided to roll the dice without a long-term contract on a highly priced, often-injured QB.

So what did the Eagles get for their gamble?

The results have been inconclusive through three games, as Bradford has looked tentative behind center and lacking in confidence when throwing the ball. He has three touchdowns, four interceptions and ranks 36th in the NFL with a 72.5 quarterback rating.

So what is the problem?

"If I knew it would already be corrected," the quarterback said. "There are small mistakes all over the place and we've got to do a better job as an offense to be more consistent. It takes 11 guys to be successful."

It's hard to put it all on Bradford's shoulders — the Eagles wide receivers have done a dreadful job of getting open and pass-catchers have dropped an NFL-high 10 passes.

Quoted

"I don't care if we score two points and win 2-0, or we score 52 points and win 52-51. We are concerned with beating Washington." Kelly

"It's a combination of everything," Chip Kelly said. "We've had some drops, but there's been some times where guys are open and we didn't put it on them at the appropriate times. But it's a combination of both."

With Josh Huff struggling to stay healthy and on the field, and Nelson Agholor fighting an early rookie slump, Jordan Matthews seems to be the only effective wideout. And as such, the Eagles have the shortest longest pass in the NFL this season at just 32 yards.

"It would be nice to get the deep ball going," Bradford said. "It would be nice to push the ball down the field. Hopefully we can do that this week."

NFL. Eagles' run defense is among best in the NFL

With Chip Kelly's Eagles, when it comes to measuring defense, it's all relative.

It's certainly not Jim Johnson's defense, but the 2015 Birds have been pretty good during the first three games this season. They head into Week 4's matchup against the Redskins ranked 8th in run defense (they were 15th in 2014), and that's a good thing, since Washington has the league's fourth-best running attack.

"We've played good against the run but I am not beating my chest. We are still 2-1," Connor Barwin said of the unit that allows 87 yards per game. "We've got a big challenge against the Redskins — they are probably the best running team we've faced this year."

BRANDON GRAHAM

The linebackers have been stellar thus far, even with absences by Kiko Alonso (who will be out a few more weeks after getting his knee scoped) and Mychal Kendricks (who was a full participant in Wednesday's practice). The front three has been all over opposing offensive lines. And when they do their job, Connor Barwin and the linebackers get to do theirs.

"It makes it fun because those guys are active," the other outside linebacker, Brandon Graham, said of the defensive line. "They're not doing their job and saying 'all right, I'm good' — they try to get to the ball, too. It's like a race to get to the ball. Who's going to make the tackle? Who's going to make the first sack of the game? Who's going to cause the first turnover? That's what we talk about."

The Eagles defense has improved in every category over last season, including points allowed, total defense and even passing yards allowed. It's a small sample size, but the secondary — led by Malcolm Jenkins — has been creating turnovers and, in most circumstances, keeping opposing wide receivers under wraps (Julio Jones not withstanding).
